ARCHAEOLOGIST DEAD IN MUMMY'S TOMB

Karnak, March 4

Professor Ebenizer Turnbull, organizer of the the Katebet Tomb expedition, was found dead in the tomb early this morning. The inner chamber was reached early in the year after much difficult labour, and the archaeologists were quite ecstatic over the excellent condition of the sarcophagus, chamber artifacts and the Katebet Mummy itself. The party was in the final weeks of its work in the area when disaster struck.

Mr. Turnbull had worked late into the night, remaining in the chamber alone after other members of the party had retired for the night. His body was discovered by Mr. Andrew Weatherby, another of the project archaeologists. Mr. Turnbull had been strangled to death. Ancient linen bandages were found around his neck.

Upon hearing of the Professor's death, several of the natives working on the excavation called upon Isis and Osiris for protection and for forgiveness for disturbing the sacred tomb. Inscriptions found on the canopic jars and doors indicate that this death may be the mysterious work of the ancient god Tuamautef and his goddess, Neith.

patch brings a terrible tale of the sea, told by Captain Ryan, of the schooner S.D. Story. He arrived yesterday from Iceland, having sailed on Oct. 19. Off the south coast of Iceland he reports that a large fleet of French fishing vessels had gathered to fish, when a heavy gale came on causing great destruction among the fleet, and scattering it in all directions. Six vessels were lost with their crews. One had her deck swept, losing her captain and 11 men, another her captain and three men, and a third her captain and two men. The total loss, as far as ascertained, is 137 men. Many of the vessels were so badly damaged that they had to be abandoned, causing 300 men to be left in Iceland in a destitute condition until a steamer arrived to carry them away. The supply of food was limited. There were few natives living there, and the men endured great hardships.

MAN FOUND DEAD AT THEATRE

An usher at the Elephant & Castle discovered the body of a man apparently murdered during last night's performance. The body was found after the entertainment in the box which, according to the usher, the man had occupied alone. The police have not been able to identify the man whom they describe as in his mid-thirties, approximately 5 feet 7 inches in height, slight, with red hair. He had apparently been stabbed to death. Anyone who might know anything about this man or the murder is urged to notify Scotland Yard.

To the Editor of the Times

Sir,— As my late husband was a well-known and respected journalist, I now turn to you in the hope that some action might be taken in the case of his terrible death.

Perhaps I should refresh your memory and that of your readers with the facts of this bizarre death. The police records are bare indeed, and report little more than that Isadora Persano was found "stark staring mad" with a matchbox in front of him which contained a remarkable worm, unknown to science. He survived only a few days in that state of madness before succumbing to a mercifully quick death.

When police failed to make any progress in the case, I sought help elsewhere with equally disappointing results.

But now I have discovered new information pointing to the guilt of a Mr. James Philimore who disappeared "without a trace"—the same day my husband was fiendishly driven mad. The police treat me with the condescension they reserve for hysterical widows, so I am now turning to you and the public for support in the pursuit and prosecution of Mr. Phillimore, who I believe to

We have received the following telegrams through the Reuters' Agency:—

ENGLAND, FRANCE AND THE HEBRIDES

Paris, March 3

The French Government has given assurance to England that as soon as the present emergency has passed, the French troops will be withdrawn from the New Hebrides.

AVALANCHES IN SWITZERLAND

Geneva, March 3

Two avalanches have fallen on the famous hospice of St. Bernard. The church has been almost entirely buried in snow. No loss of life is reported.

IRELAND AND THE VATICAN

Vienna, March 4

A telegram from Rome states that the Duke of Norfolk will return to London in about a week. It is said that his grace will inform the British Government of the concessions which, in the opinion of the Vatican, ought to be made to Ireland for the purpose of "enabling the Irish clergy to exercise a tranquilizing influence."

THE UNITED STATES

Philadelphia, March 4

Mr. Jay Gould arrived at the Island of St. Thomas on Sunday en route to Florida.

The Lehigh Valley colliers have brought the strike to an end and are resuming work at the old rate of wages, the same as was accepted by the Reading colliers on the resumption of work.

Representative Randall has introduced into the House his proposed Tariff Bill framed on Protectionist principles, which he has prepared in opposition to the Democratic Reduced Tariff Bill now before the Ways and Means Committee.

LAW REPORT, March 4

Supreme Court of Judicature QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION (Before Mr. Theodore Erlanger and Mr. Justice Manisty)

In the Matter of GWENDOLYN ELLIOT NEVIL, A MARRIED WOMAN

This was an application on the part of a married woman under the 3rd and 4th W. IV., c. 75, for leave to execute an "acknowledgement" for the conveyance of her separate estate without the concurrence of her husband, now a lunatic. Her affidavit stated that since her marriage she was interested in certain freehold property, in which she had an undivided fourth part, the remaining shares belonging to her brothers and sisters; and it was desired to mortgage the property, with a view to which her concurrence was necessary, and her husband had been found a lunatic upon an inquisition. Upon these facts,

Mr. W.E. ROBARTS moved on her part for a rule allowing her to execute the requisite acknowledgement and deeds without the concurrence of her husband.

CHARGES OF MURDER

At Llandaff Police-court yesterday a young man named David Jeans, a carpenter, was committed for trial for the wilful murder of James Carey, at Cardiff, on the 26th of last month. The prisoner and his sweetheart, a Miss Merchant, were walking in the fields near Cardiff on the night of the day named when they were accosted by Carey and four other men, who demanded money from them. The prisoner resisted the demand, whereupon he and his companion were attacked with stones, and they took refuge in flight. Carey and his confederates pursued them, upon which Jeans turned on his assailants and, drawing a revolver, fired at them six times. Three of the men were wounded, Carey receiving a bullet in the head, from the

WANT OF DOCK ACCOMMODATION AT GIBRALTAR

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—I ask for a small space in your columns in the hope that a note of warning sounded from under the shadow of the noble Rock of Gibraltar may command a hearing.

From the Treaty of Utrecht downwards we have held Gibraltar, we have expended untold millions on its fortifications and armaments, we maintain a garrison of 6,000 men for its defence as an essential strategical base for naval operations and for the support of our commerce. Occupying a position of such importance, Gibraltar should be something more than a mere coaling station. The means of repairing ships should certainly be provided. For this purpose we have a small but efficient dockyard. A graving dock has not yet been constructed. If the gunboat stationed if these waters requires docking she must be sent round to Cadiz. The only local means for the repair of merchant vessels is the clumsy expedient of careening. History repeats itself, and, as the gravest maritime conflicts of the past were fought in this vicinity, so it might be in the future. With the new weapons, the ram and the torpedo, the injuries received will be of a nature especially requiring a dock for the purposes of repair. It is difficult to picture a spectacle more humiliating than that of a British squadron returning to Gibraltar after some hard fought victory and compelled to send its injured ships on the beach to avoid sinking.

Under the provisions of a recent Act of Parliament the Admiralty is empowered to assist private enterprise by way of subsidy. A sum not exceeding one-tenth of the annual

THE REPORTS OF DIVORCE CASES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—Can you not by your influence induce other newspapers to be as careful as you are in editing the reports of divorce cases? I hear everywhere loud complaints as to the grave mischief which is being caused by the details which some journals think fit to give of the Campbell case, and of the effect which the reading of these reports has on servants, on the young, and on the working classes. Young lads may be seen devouring these details as they go home from work. Servants sit up through the night to read them, and when an East-end vicar tried to remonstrate with some of his parishioners as to their want of respect for the marriage tie, he was met by reference to the habits of the higher classes as disclosed in two recent divorce cases.

I believe you can help the public, that you will help, by calling upon the Judges to make some rules as to cases involving indecent details, if indeed they have not already, as I believe they have power to prohibit full reports of such trials till they are all over and therefore less interesting.

And can you not also call upon the Home Secretary to intervene through the Public Prosecutor with a view to restraining without prosecuting those papers which are least careful? For the freedom of the Press, invaluable as it is, does not extend to the publication of offensive details of evidence. It is little less than a scandal that the law officers of the Crown, who should be available for the protection of the public morals, should be engaged for the parties in the Campbell case and unable to move on behalf of the public to prevent the unhappiness of a private family from being turned into the corruption of a whole nation.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

The House of Representatives to-day passed a Bill for applying the surplus to the purchase of bonds. The decision marked the end of three weeks of intense debate and considerable acrimony. The action is expected to aid the British Bond market.

THE BOARD OF WORKS AND PUBLICHOUSES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—This morning the Works Committee of the Board of Works decided by a majority of three to one to re-erect as a publichouse the King's Arms, Fulham High-street, recently pulled down on account of the new bridge works.

The inhabitants of Fulham only learnt on Thursday last that the matter was to be decided so soon; there were only two days to work; in spite of this a petition was got up and signed by almost every resident within a mile of the spot, in the High-street itself there being only two refusals to sign.

The King's Arms has long been a source of annoyance to the people of Fulham, who have more than their fair share of publichouses and this action of the Committee of the Board of Works will cause keen regret and disappointment to them.

I write to you, Sir, in the hope that a public remonstrance may induce the Board to reconsider the determination of their Committee.

Faithfully yours,
JOHN SINCLAIR, Vicar of St. Dionis, Fulham

effects of which he died shortly afterwards. Jeans and Miss Merchant found shelter in a cottage, and he reported the occurrence to the police, saying that he had acted in self-defense. The hearing of the case occupied ten hours.

"EBERT V. EBERT"

The divorce cause of "Ebert v. Ebert," in which the Queen's Proctor has intervened, will be heard this morning before Sir James Hannen and a special jury. Sir Clifton Norman, Q.C. and Mr. Victor Dechancé will appear on behalf of the Queen's Proctor; and Mr. Henry Matthews, Q.C., M.P., Mr. Inderwick, Q.C., and Mr. Cecil Mason will be counsel for the petitioner, Mr. Ebert, M.P. We understand that neither the respondent, Mrs. Ebert, nor Sir Giles Elgin will be represented by counsel.

FISHING RIGHTS.—Mr. Broadhurst, M.P., has reintroduced the Bill for conferring on the public free and unrestricted right to fish with rod and line in all rivers and streams in England which are public highways or upon or along which the public have right of passage. An exception is made by the Bill as regards any portions of such streams as were "put in defence in the reign of His late Majesty King Henry II" and have been so maintained thereafter. The Bill is not to affect the rights of any one seized or possessed of a "several fishery" in any such stream which has been created or in existence in the reign of that "late Majesty," and has been maintained as a several fishery thereafter. Nor is the Bill to authorize fishing in a manner prohibited by law or during any closed season.
